What a pity Guiteau couldn't be dropped from public notice—dropped about six feet.

Congress will take a recess of two weeks beginning on the 21st of the present month.

Vennor's very cold and blustering weather was to have commenced on the 15th and continue till the 20th, but it didn't.

Congressman Pound, of the Eighth District, has been appointed on the special committee to settle the expenses incident to the illness and burial of President Garfield.

A report says that Mrs. Garfield has been paying the Mentor homestead a visit, and has given orders for the erection of a fire-proof building for the special storage of the late President's private letters and papers. It will be immediately constructed.

They have got Judge David Davis where he can't dodge the question. It was reported that he would soon marry and marry one of his deceased wife's sisters. The Judge takes a firm stand, and says he can't do it as his wife had but two sisters and both have living husbands.

A Chicago paper writes up Milwaukee in this fashion: "The dispatches announce the completion of a line of railway from Madison to Milwaukee. Madison is the Capital of Wisconsin. Milwaukee is a place where travelers between Chicago and Madison stop for dinner—and don't get it."

The Gazette publishes to-day the prospectus of the Philadelphia Times one of the foremost newspapers of the East. It is marvelously successful because it is one of the most readable family papers in the country. There is not one that excels it, and few there are that equal it. We invite attention to the prospectus which is well worth reading carefully by all who wish to take an Eastern paper of almost matchless ability and enterprise.

Here is a compliment to Governor Smith and his staff, which is clipped from the Milwaukee Republican: "For the first time in history of the country, it is believed, a legislative appropriation for a celebration failed to be exhausted, and a residue has been returned the State treasury. It happened at Madison, yesterday, when Governor Smith returned over $500 to the treasury, that amount having been saved by judicious economy, out of the $1,500 appropriation by the last Legislature, for the expenses of the Wisconsin delegation to the Yorktown celebration."

The most expensive of all the expensive things at Washington is the government printing office. It cost during the last year $2,215,929 to float the institution. This is a quarter of a million more than it cost the year previous and half a million more than in 1879. Most of the work turned out of this office is of no avail at all. This institution will soon be as extravagant as the arrears of pension act.—Madison Democrat.

And it will be borne in mind that this extravagance was practiced while the Democrats were in the majority in the House. If the Democrats were so anxious for reform why didn't they cut down the expenses of the printing office, and also vote against the pension arrears bill?

The Secretary of the State board of charities and reform says there are twelve counties in the State that have made provisions for the care of their chronic insane, in accordance with the law enacted last winter, and they are, Brown, Dane, Eau Claire, Grant, Jefferson, Rock, Sauk, Sheboygan, Walworth, Waupaca and Winnebago. The county boards of nine counties are considering the matter, with a good prospect of adopting the plan. Dodge county alone has made arrangements for the construction of buildings to cost $25,000, with accommodations for 80 persons. The buildings are to be erected on what is known as the semi-detached plan; that is, three separate buildings connected with a narrow corridor.

THE MOVEMENT AGAINST PENSION ARREARS.

It was stated in the Gazette a few days ago that a movement had been made to repeal the arrears-of-pension act, and that if the act was not repealed, some important change would be made by Congress regarding the arrears law. The most extravagant bill ever passed by Congress was the pension arrears bill. It was one of the worst jobs Congress ever did. It has not only opened a channel through which tens of millions of dollars of the government funds have been squandered, but it has led to perjury and general scoundrelism in order that the arrearage money under the bill might be obtained.

It matters but little now who is responsible for the passage of this iniquitous bill. Of course a Democratic House passed it hurriedly, and it was endorsed by Republicans almost unanimously. It was a party measure—gotten up chiefly by the Democrats. It was not gotten up to help the worthy and the disabled soldiers and the needy widows and orphans. The Democrats never thought of these; they thought of the popularity the measure would give the party, and considered it a sharp move against the Republicans. One very prominent Democrat paper in New York put the thing in a nutshell when it said: "It was thought, and with some superficial show of reason, that if a Democratic Congress exceeded in liberality to the soldier pensioners of the land the previous Republican Congresses, the result must be helpful to the party among the class of voters directly interested." There was a good deal of trickery in the scheme, and not a Democrat in Congress was sincere in voting for the bill. It was passed just before a Presidential election with a view that it would be a material help to the Democratic party in the campaign of 1880. But the trick failed. With a popular soldier on the Democratic ticket, it was found that no votes could be made on account of the arrearage act.

The act was too scandalous to enlist the warm support of the masses of either party. The Democrats who managed the bill from the time it was drafted till it became a law, claimed that it would require no more than fifteen millions of dollars to pay all arrears under the bill. Commissioner Bentley estimated the aggregate cost at twenty-six millions, and members of Congress thought he was crazy. It has been learned that the arrears-of-pensions act will cost more than two hundred and fifty millions. Should the law remain on the statute books another year and claims continue to flood the pension bureau, there is no telling how many additional millions might be required to pay the claimants.

Those who do not desire to see the government robbed, will wish the repeal of the arrearage law, or a modification of it so that none but the disabled soldiers, and the widows and orphans of all who gave their lives to their country, will be pensioners. The government has been cheated quite long enough and let the iniquitious act no longer be a disgrace to the country.

There are other reasons why this act should be wiped out. It was a piece of such patent demagogism that it needs no defining, and should not be allowed to reflect upon the wisdom and good sense of the Republicans who are now in the majority. Again, the lesson and its moral are commended to both Democrats and Republicans. The Democrats have adopted the policy of insincerity and trickness for twenty years past, and have depended upon it for a political living. They have made such miserable failures, and the reputation of the party has become so notorious, that they are now willing to do something in the way of repealing the pension arrears act. They have learned that all such methods are precarious and unprofitable, and the Republicans should not be blind to the lesson.

PERSONAL NOTES.

President Arthur's children will remain in New York during the winter.

The young Duke of Portland is in no fear of going into bankruptcy with ordinary economy. His predecessor left him $7,250,000 in solid cash, and beside that he has an annual income of $950,000.

Speaker Keifer is already mentioned as a candidate for the United States Senate to succed Mr. Pendleton. But Pendleton has more than three years to serve yet. For promotion, there is nothing like being an Ohio Republican.

It is finally decided that Colonel Chandler P. Chapman, at present Assistant Inspector General on Governor Smith's staff, will be Adjutant General of the State, General Edwin E. Bryant having tendered his resignation. Colonel Chapman is one of the best military men in the State, and aside from being the very efficient commanding officer of the Lake City Guards, is thoroughly informed as to the laws, rules, and regulations of the army as well as those of the Wisconsin National Guard. It is not too much to say that there is no man in the State better qualified to become General Bryant's successor than Colonel Chapman.

Patti will sing to a twenty thousand dollar house at Cincinnati, on the 28th of this month.

As a general rule they take older men for counsel in Europe than they do in this country, but the new cabinet is the youngest that has ever been know in France. Its oldest minister is only sixty-two, its youngest thirty-five. The present ministers have an average of a little over fifty-one years. The average in England is higher. Mr. Gladstone is twenty-nine years older than M. Gambetta; and Mr. Chamberlain, the youngest member of the cabinet, is ten years older than the youngest holder of a portfolio in France, and two years older than the Prime Minister of France.

A GOOD SHOT.

SAVORY, Ill., Dec. 15,—Last night a bold burglar got his deserts here in a summary manner. Albert Dunlap's store having been visited by burglars five times, and his safe blown to pieces, he hired a watchman, named Cline, to sleep in the store. The marauder this time undertook to pry open the door, when Cline fired on him with a shot gun loaded with seven rifle balls. They passed through a two-inch door, and entering his throat just under his chin, lodged near the spinal column as it is thought. Another fellow came and spoke to him and then fled. The wounded man is insensible, and paralyzed on one side, and will probably die. The name of J. Dyson is on one of his arms in ink, and Levenia on the other arm. He had been a sailor.

Alderman Tucker, Boston, says you may state that I have paid for medicine and treatment in 20 years $3,000, without receiving permanent benefit. Entirely cured of his disease (salt rheum) by Cuticura Remedies.

H. E. Carpenter, Esq., Henderson, N Y., cured of Psoriasis or Leprosy, of twenty years' standing, by the Cuticura Resolvent internally, and Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally. The most wonderful case on record.

DEPRESSED IN SPIRITS.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—"I believe he is playing a part," said Dr. Allen McLean Hamilton, of New York, a well equipped young expert, of Guiteau this afternoon, voicing the unanimous opinion of the experts present, at the trial, as stated in these dispatches on Monday last; "he is a perfectly sane man. His actions here are totally different to his actions in jail. His manner is just the opposite to that which has characterized all that he has said and done in my presence in his cell. I am compelled to believe that he is playing a part."

No one need wonder that Guiteau left the court room this afternoon depressed in spirit. The testimony to-day was as damaging as that of yesterday, and he realizes fully that evidence cannot be piled upon evidence in this way for a week longer, as the prosecution threatens without damaging his case irretrievably.

Scoville got no satisfaction out of Reynolds in a severe cross-examination, and witness after witness testified, as he had done, to the sanity of the accused.

The prosecution closed its testimony in rebuttal at noon. Mrs. Dunmire, formerly the wife of the assassin, was reserved until the last.

She was not asked any of the searching questions respecting his personal conduct, which Guiteau was looking for. She made no disagreeable revelations, and she made none. He gave her his blessing, very fervently, and was glad to do it. He was very nervous while she was on the stand, and felt great relief when she left it. Behind the slight girlish figure stood her dark-faced present husband, with his hand on his hip pocket. It may have been that he had no intention of using the weapon upon which he kept his hand, although he intimated before he entered the court room that he would stand no nonsense from the miserable little wretch." At any rate, Guiteau, whose eyes were glued upon his former wife, and her protector, was imperturbed by the act. There was nothing more sensational about the scene when Mrs. Dunmire was testifying than when Miss Grant, the boarding house keeper, was testifying, and many people left the court-room at noon very much disappointed.

The testimony of Drs. Loring and Hamilton, the experts, after recess demolished the testimony of the experts for the defense, and left little doubt of his sanity in any mind.

Guiteau was as violent as ever to-day. He was particularly violent to poor Scoville, of whom he could not say too much in contempt and condemnation. He was courteous to the court and jury, but to all the rest of the room he flung defiance.

Senator Sherman, Judges Dady, of Oregon, and Dennision, of Michigan, sat with Judge Cox on the bench this morning. They all agreed that the assassin was shamming.

IN A MUDDLE.

A Difficulty in Wisconsin Which Cannot be Straightened Out.

MADISON, Dec. 16.—A new complication has arisen in respect to the biennial sessions amendments recently ratified in this State, and some trouble is likely to be caused. It is claimed that section 21 of the constitution, as amended, can be made to apply to the annual session next month, as well as to biennial sessions that follow. The amendment to section twenty-one provides that each member of the Legislature shall receive $500 salary for a regular session, but fails to specify whether a regular annual session as now or for regular biennial sessions hereafter. Some members say that the amendment, in the absence of specific directions, takes immediate effect without waiting for the election of the biennial Legislature, and they will claim $500 salary, instead of $350, now allowed. If this be done, applications will be made to the Supreme Court for a writ restraining the Secretary of State from drawing any salary warrants until the point is decided.

John Jay Orton, a Milwaukee attorney who was recently disbarred from practice in all Wisconsin courts, by order of Judge Small, applied to the Supreme court to-day for an order compelling Judge Small to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt and be suspended from the office of presiding Judge in the Second Judicial Circuit. The alleged contempt consists in Judge Small's disregard of the stay of proceedings granted by the Supreme Court pending orator's appeal. Orton claims that the stay of proceedings was to resume practice, which Small would not permit. The order was taken under advisement.

BUSHELS OF BILLS.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—The House had another dull session to-day, incident to the call of States for the introduction of bills, continued from last Tuesday. It will take another day to finish the list, and an adjournment was taken accordingly till Monday. The deluge of bills seen last Tuesday was continued to-day. With the day's work about 1,400 measures have been introduced thus far. It is expected that the roll will be completed Monday, and that Tuesday the committees will be announced. It was proposed to Mr. Keifer that in order to insure their completion at that time he allow some one else to occupy the chair Monday, but he declined, although it would have been a great favor to him, because he said he wanted to see that all these bills were properly referred, and would not trust to anyone else to do it. The House decided to adjourn from the 21st inst. to January 5, provided, of course, the Senate concurs.

SADLY DISTURBED.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16—The star route people are very sadly disturbed by the nomination of Brewster to-day. They find it hard to give up the hope that President Arthur would befriend them to an extent that would secure them from a fair and impartial trial. Their organs here and elsewhere have for the past few days abounded in able articles showing conclusively that nobody but James McVeagh, Gibson, Billy Cook, and Woodward desired Brewster's appointment, and that it was utterly preposterous to suppose that this administration would so decisively show its hand against them. Their chagrin and alarm to-night is genuine and apparently very uncomfortable.

Virtue Acknowledged.

Mrs. Ira Mulholland, Albany, N. Y., writes: "For several years I have suffered from oft-recurring bilious headaches, constipation, dyspepsia, and complaints peculiar to my sex. CONFIRMED.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

Antony and Cleopatra—Home Decorations—Home Amusements—The Verbalist &c.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA. By William Shakespeare. Edited by William J. Rolfe. New York: Harper & Brother. Chicago: Jansen, McClurg & Co. Price 70 cents.

Mr. William J. Rolfe, who is widely known as a Shakespearian critic, and whose editions of the plays of the immortal bard are accepted as standard authority, has finished twenty-seven of the plays of Shakespeare, the the last one being the Tragedy of Antony and Cleopatra. Like the preceding volumes it is handsomely illustrated, the text admirably printed, accompanied by a historical, and critical notes of the play.

For sale by James Sutherland & Sons, Janesville.

Appleton's Home Books are a series of new hand volumes at low price, devoted to all subjects pertaining to home and household. The volume before us is fully illustrated, and a practical exposition of the artistic work mentioned in the title. It would make a very pretty and appropriate holiday gift for a lady friend with art-decorative tastes.

Another of the Home Books is Home Amusements, uniform in size and binding with the Home Decorations. The subjects treated in this volume are private theatricals, tableaux virants, brain games, fortune telling, embroidery and other decorative arts, lawn tennis, garden parties, dancing, and more than a dozen other branches of amusements. It is a practical work on these subjects, and will be found exceedingly useful and entertaining. Price in cloth, 60 cents.

For sale by Jansen, McClurg & Co., Chicago, and James Sutherland & Sons, Janesville.

THE VERBALIST. A manual devoted to brief discussions of the right and wrong use of words. By Alfred Ayres. Published by D. Appleton & Company, New York. For sale by Jansen, McClurg & Co., Chicago. Price $1.

This volume is not only of interest but of value to every one who would speak and write correctly. Many who are self-content with their use of language would be surprised should they peruse this book, for many forms of speech in common usage are arraigned before the bar, and forced to plead guilty in view of the weight of law and evidence against them. The author appears not in the role of a censorious critic, but modestly gives his reasons and the opinions of leading authorities. For the sake of convenience the manual is alphabetically arranged, making it ready for reference, and at the same time its and matter prove so interesting, that it is far from being a mere dictionary. Every student of the English should one and use this little volume.

For sale by James Sutherland & Sons.

THE PRATAGORAS OF PLATO. By E. G. Sibler, Ph. D. Published by Harper & Brothers, New York. For sale by Jansen, McClurg & Co., Chicago.

Of the so-called Socratic Dialogues of Plato this is pronounced the finest from a literary point of view, and while it has been almost wholly neglected in the courses of classic reading in this country it has been much favored in the schools abroad, and among all lovers of the literature of the Greeks. The present form in which it presents itself is certainly one which commands attention and merits careful examination, and should serve to awaken an interest in this good bit of ancient literature.

APPENDIX TO INITIA GRÆCA, Part I. By William Smith, D. C. L., LL. D. Published by Harper & Brothers, New York. For sale by Jansen, McClurg & Co., Chicago.

This little volume consists of additional exercises, with examination papers on Initia Græca, Part I, and also contains easy reading lessons and an analysis of the sentences, serving thus as an introduction to Part II of the Intia Græca. In the lower forms in the public and private schools this appendix together with the Intia Græca, cannot but prove valuable helps and guides to the knowledge of the Greek, and an examination of this course of lessons by any teacher will convince him that they possess some marked advantages both in private study and class drill.

THE PHILADELPHIA TIMES

Now stands confessedly at the head of Philadelphia journalism in all that makes a thoroughly complete, general and family newspaper. It is more complete in its news, in its special correspondence, in its varied contributions on all subjects of popular interest, and in all the qualities of a newspaper for the family circle and for the business man than any of its contemporaries, because its facilities and resources are equal to every want of a first-class national journal.

'The Weekly Times'

has nearly doubled its former large circulation during the year. Its contributors from week to week are among the foremost men of the nation, and no department of news or literature is slighted in any number on any pretext. It is adapted as well to women as to men; hence although its political intelligence is full and accurate and its political editorials free and fearless, liberal provision is made for literary, dramatic and musical matters, travels and adventure, fiction, poetry, fashions and the chronicle of current social events. In all these departments the pens of the best writers are engaged, while selections from other journals are made with care, taste and fullness that are unsurpassed.

The "Annals of the War"

embracing chapters of unwritten history contributed by prominent actors in the war of the rebellion, are a valuable feature of the paper and have become a recognized depository of such matters, whether from Northern or Southern sources. This department as well as all others, will be kept fully up to the high standard of former years.

THE GAZETTE.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 17.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY

OUT WEST.

Under the forest, of its snows unladen,
And kissing back the nervous kiss of spring,
I sit and dream of courtly knight and maiden,
And old-world pomp encompassing a king.

Out of her wintry sleep the earth is waking,
And birds and flowers carol her reveille;
O'er East and West the common promise breaking,
Breathes the first whisper of their holiday.

Without the mighty forms of things primeval
Stand all untenanted of Custom's robes;
Within, my mind shapes pictures mediæval,
With pencil fashioned forth in other globes.

The rugged miners share my board and pillow,
And by the camp-fire sing their lawless song;
But at a bound my thought o'errides the billow,
And breasts the strong surf by a flight as strong.

What do I here, among the waving grasses,
Which never learned to trim their graces wtid?
While by my side Nature's rude army passes,
Another world still claims me for her child.

In vain I ply the ax in pass or clearing;
In vain I fill me with the unfettered air;
Still to my eyes are other scenes appearing,
Still my heart hearkens the low voice of Care.

Among our ranks no woman comes to harm us,
And sew us discord for our hands to reap;
No wiles and jars allure us or alarm us,
Or wanton with the mighty arm of sleep.

Yet here, for me, though heart and will are master,
As strong as iron and as calm as Death,
The will will waver and the heart beat faster,
Touched by the memory of a woman's breath.

Why are ye here, rude fellows of my labor,
Thus outlawed from the bound of woman's reign?
Read I, beneath the swart hues of my neighbor,
Another story of another pain?

She said she loved me—and one day she left me,
Without a warning and without a word;
Of past and future at a blow bereft me;
The cause unspoken and the plea unheard.

Behind me honor, and high hopes before me—
A life of earnest and a name of worth;
Her glamour shed the bright delusion o'er me;
Her presence kept the promise of my birth.

Then fell the blow, and past and future shivered,
Just at a fairy finger's heartless touch;
And from the bondage of a lie delivered,
I laughed that I had trusted overmuch.

Laughed! and the echo of that hollow laughter
Rings in my heart with one eternal knell;
And the slow years which rolled their burden after,
With all the burden can not crush the spell.

Pines of the Sierras, spread your mantles round me,
And hide me from the past, untrodden West!
O! that the free lands and free souls which bound me,
Could break the fetters of my prisoned breast!

In vain, in vain! Not the dividing ocean,
With all its storms one memory can drown;
While the vexed phantom of a lost devotion,
Still the tortured bosom dies not down.

Up and to work! The Western spring invites me,
And freedom calls me forth among the free!
But no! Nor work nor freedom here delights me,
The Eastern bondage falls again on me.

—Herman C. Merivale, in London Spectator.

HIS FIRST WIFE'S RELATIONS.

Hubert Stickney's choice of a second wife was not generally approved. If Mr. Stickney had been an ordinary citizen, there would undoubtedly have been talk enough in regard to the unsuitableness of the match; but Mr. Stickney was not an ordinary citizen. He was selectman, surveyor, master of the Grange, general administrator and advisor on all legal, moral and domestic subjects. The Governor himself could scarcely be more in demand than this well-informed and high-minded Vermont farmer. Now for such a man to choose a companion from fashionable city life was inevitably to cast some doubt on the soundness of his judgment in the past, and so friends and neighbors shook their heads sadly, and told each other that Stickney's influence was a thing of the past.

Now this gentleman, honorable as he had certainly proved himself in every department of life, had not been quite frank with his lady-love. He had told her with some pride the exact amount of his income. He had pictured the fine old homestead with the warmth of one who loves what he is describing. His intended wife had known just how many elms there were in front of the house, as well as their ages and histories. The lawn, the orchards, the mountains, the little lake in the heart of the woods, she was perfectly acquainted with. In fact, there was nothing omitted from the picture but the human figures occupying the foreground. These were the first widow's relations, for no one knew better than Mr. Stickney how prominent were the positions they occupied.

The gentleman's voice did not seem quite natural when he presented his wife to the ladies assembled at the homestead to meet the travelers.

"Florence," he said, "allow me. This is Mrs. Mazonson," presenting the elderly lady, who certainly did not look very gracious, "and Miss Maria and Miss Susan Mazonson," indicating two ladies of uncertain age, equally stiff and uncordial.

Miss Susan Mazonson! The young wife, whose appreciation of the humorous was very keen, had all she could do to keep from laughing in the faces of the unbending trio with the comical names. It was very good of Mr. Stickney to invite friends to meet her, she told herself, as she pleasantly greeted her seeming guests. But why had he selected such a funereal-looking party? At the tea-table Mrs. Stickney, fresh as a rose in her pretty summer silk and dainty laces, sat beside her husband. The elder Mazonson presided at the tea-urn. This was more inexplicable than the rest; but perhaps it was the fashion in Vermont to treat the lady of the house as a guest for a time, and so this insult was good-naturedly accounted for. The table, though unexceptionably appointed and covered with every imaginable good thing, was waited upon by her guests. This was doubtless another act of courtesy, the newcomer told herself, but the sight of a servant would have been an inexpressible relief. It was very annoying to be served by one's visitors, but this being the fashion she must make the best of it. After starting numberless topics of conversation, and having them all fall dead—even her husband seemed suddenly struck dumb—Mrs. Stickney was obliged to give up the contest. How different this was from the home-coming she had so lovingly anticipated! Such good jolly times as they had all through their six weeks' wedding tour, and now, in "the twinkling of an eye," everything had changed, or seemed to change. Of course it was all seeming, the young wife told herself, but it was surely very disagreeable. After the wretched meal was over, Mrs. Stickney, almost ready to cry, invited her husband to take a walk, but here was Mrs. Mazonson at his elbow.

"Hiram had to go away this noon," she said, "so I suppose you'll have to milk, Hubert."

Mrs. Mazonson was very tall, very thin, very dark, and her voice was so unutterably deep and hollow that Mrs. Stickney could not rid herself of the notion that it belonged to somebody else. The city-bred young lady knew that cows had to be milked, but she had never associated her husband with the one that performed the operation, and now turned an astonished face to that gentleman and the assembled Mazonsons.

"It must be fun to milk," she remarked, determined to put the best possible face on affairs. "I'll go and see you."

"Not in that dress, I hope," said Mrs. Mazonson, as Mr. Stickney left the room. "I was going to say, a little while ago," she went on, "that seeing as you was dressed up, you needn't mind about the dishes."

The dishes? What in the world did this dreadful woman mean? Before she had time to inquire, her tormentor had left the room; and now, more perplexed than ever, Mrs. Stickney went in search of her husband. She found him at last in the barn-yard, and in the excitement of a new sensation almost forgot the disagreeable things that had preceded it. In a dilapidated straw hat, patched coat and blue overalls, she did not at first recognize her husband; but when she did, she clapped her hands like a child and laughed as merry a laugh as was ever heard on the Stickney farm.

"Is that the way people always dress when they milk?" she inquired, touching the old coat caressingly with her little white hands.

"One must dress according to one's work on a farm, Florence," Mr. Stickney remarked, sententiously.

Something in her husband's words or manner must have recalled her late annoyances, for the smile faded from her lips, and her eyes grew sad and troubled. "Hubert," she said, softly, "who are those—those ladies at the house?"

"Why, they are the Mazonsons, Florence—Mrs. Mazonson and her two daughters," the master of the Grange replied.

"It was very kind of you to ask Mrs. Mazonson and her daughters to meet me," the young wife resumed, with a touch of something in her tone that her companion was not familiar with, "but I can't understand why they should seem so very much at home, Hubert."

Mr. Stickney moved the three-legged stool to the side of another cow, and commenced milking again, before he replied.

"Didn't I mention to you, Florence, that these ladies lived with me?" he inquired. "I know I didn't dwell on the subject," he went on, "but I must have spoken of it."

"Mention to me that these ladies lived with you!" Mrs. Stickney repeated, oblivious to the rest of her husband's remark, a hard look settling round the pretty mouth. "May I ask, Mr. Stickney, who these ladies are? I know they are the Mazonsons," she added, in the same singular tone, "but what are they to you?"

"They are relatives of my first wife," the gentleman replied, in a voice that had the calmness of desperation in it. "I must have taken for granted that you knew, Florence. Mrs. Mazonson was Mrs. Stickney's mother and Maria and Susan her sisters."

"And they have always lived here?"

"For some time before and ever since Mrs. Stickney died Mrs. Mazonson has been my housekeeper, and the girls have been her assistants."

"Why was there no servant, Mr. Stickney, to wait on the table this evening?" was the lady's next question.

"We have no servants, Florence. It is not the custom with Vermont farmers, my dear."

"And all the work of your house is performed by the Mazonsons?"

"Yes."

"Who did it before the Manzonsons came?"

"Mrs. Stickney, my dear."

For a moment there was silence in the barn-yard. Then there was a rustle of retreating silk, a light step going swiftly toward the house, and thus the singular interview ended. This was a very unpleasant commencement, Mr. Stickney told himself, and for a while this gentleman's milking was purely mechanical. From the bottom of his heart he wished he and his wife could be alone. On the other hand there was a great deal to do in the house, much more than Florence could ever manage if she worked night and day. At this point Mr. Stickney really did have serious doubts as to the wisdom of this second marriage of his. For the first time he asked himself whether it would be right to impose the drudgery of farm-work on this young and delicately nurtured woman. He had thought very little about the domestic part of the programme. He was accustomed to seeing the women about him constantly occupied, and Florence knew she was accepting a farmer when she agreed to marry him. Then, too, Mrs. Mazonson was exceedingly competent; indeed, no housekeeper could be more so; and Mr. Stickney summed it all up by assuring himself that Florence could get along with the Mazonsons easily enough if she had only a mind to think so.

In the meantime Mrs. Stickney had locked herself into her room, and with clinched hands and flashing eyes was recalling every moment of the time since she first met the man she had married. She had been grossly deceived and imposed upon, and worst of all, the deception and imposition had come from the one who had promised to love, honor and cherish her to the day of her death. The drawn lips grew tender and pitiful as she thought how utterly she had loved and trusted him, and how entirely she had believed in his affection for herself. "To live with these solemn and automatic Mazonsons would be worse than keeping house in a tomb, with skeletons for company," she sobbed. She could not and would not endure it. No man had a right to ask such a sacrifice from his wife. But she hadn't been asked. She had been cheated into her present position. She would leave the house where she had been and would continue to be unutterably wretched, and go straight back to her father. Little did he think that the rich and honorable Hubert Stickney would heap such indignities upon his daughter. She would go. No, she would stay, and show the Mazonsons, and her husband, too, what kind of stuff she was made of.

That evening Mr. Stickney was detained below by callers. It was ten o'clock before he was at liberty, and then, to his great delight, Florence was fast asleep. The poor child had forgotten her troubles, and the morning would show things in a more promising light. He would do everything he could to make up for the Mazonsons, and after a little everything would go smoothly enough. Mr. Stickney would not have been so certain of this if he had seen the tear-stained face and quivering lids. Ignorant of all this, and in spite of his ten years' experience as a husband, utterly ignorant of the delicacy and sensitiveness of a true woman's nature, Mr. Stickney went calmly and comfortably to sleep.

The next morning, after waiting to be called to breakfast, Mrs. Stickney, in the daintiest of muslin wrappers, presented herself in the dining-room. Her husband had just finished his early morning's work, and now greeted her with a smile and a kiss. The elder Mazonson looked exceedingly flushed and flurried, and Maria and Susan Mazonson flew briskly round at the bidding of their superior officer.

"I beg your pardon," said Mrs. Stickney, in her calmest and coolest manner, "I thought breakfast was ready. I hope I am not intruding."

A smile played round the lips of Miss Susan, who, in spite of her dreadful name, was not altogether so hideous as Florence had thought at first sight. The rightful occupant of the chair at the head of the table waited to see if Mrs. Mazonson would occupy it, and finding that she did, went calmly round and sat by her husband.

"Yes, breakfast is ready," said Mrs. Mazonson, in a voice between a growl and a groan. "It's been ready some time."

"I hope you slept well last night, Mrs. Stickney?" This from Maria Mazonson, whose voice Florence now heard for the first time.

"Very well, thank you," Mrs. Stickney cordially replied.

"You slept late enough, if that's any sign," said Mrs. Mazonson in her most sepulchral tone.

"I always sleep late, Mrs. Mazonson," Florence replied, as she slowly poured the cream into her coffee.

"You can't sleep late on this farm very well," the elder lady began again, her face ablaze. "I've been up since half past four," she went on, "and now it's half past seven. I've skimmed eighteen pans of milk, washed all the pans, and made twenty-five pounds of butter this morning."

"You must be very tired," Mrs. Stickney remarked, looking the irate dame innocently in the face.

"Well, I guess I'm tired," the housekeeper replied. "The girls helped me all they could, and——"

"O, ma," Susan interrupted, flushing painfully as she spoke, "why shouldn't we help you, I should like to know?"

At this point Mrs. Stickney made up her mind that she was going to like one of the Mazonsons after all.

"—they got this breakfast, I want you to understand." Mr. Mazonson finished what she had to say in spite of interruptions.

"It is a very nice breakfast," Florence remarked. "I don't know when I have enjoyed anything so much."

Mr. Stickney glanced at his wife There was something in the tone which reminded him of the barnyard tete-a-tete. There must certainly be an understanding between himself and his wife right away, he thought. It would never do to let things go on in this style. Mrs. Mazonson must be rebuked also. Her attitude was certainly very objectionable, and should be corrected immediately. Meantime Mrs. Stickney ate her breakfast with relish, and passed her cup for some more coffee. "Which of you ladies," indicating the Misses Mazonson, "made this coffee?" she asked, pleasantly. "It certainly is delicious."

"Neither of 'em made it," Mrs. Mazonson answered promptly. "Do you think I'd trust anybody to make coffee but myself?"

Mrs. Stickney had decided that her platform should be plainly understood both by her husband and the Mazonsons before she left the dining-room. It promised to be a hard battle to fight; but the young wife had courage enough now for a host of husbands and a regiment of first wife's relations.

"Are you going to be very busy today, Hubert?" Mrs. Stickney asked her husband, as the meal drew to a close.

"I have been away so long that my days will be occupied for some time to come," the gentleman replied.

"Perhaps, then, Miss Susan or Miss Maria would go to ride with me this morning?" and Florence threw a glance full of sweetness at the Misses Mazonson. "It is such a lovely morning," she continued; "and after a little it will be too warm, I fear."

Mrs. Stickney waited a moment for some kind of a response, and receiving none, said, "You would like to accompany me, would you not, Miss Susan?"

The young lady was on the point of replying, but her mother came in ahead. "Hubert," she began, "I should think it was high time you gave your wife to understand what kind of a place she has come to live in. I don't suppose this wife can gad off and leave the work" and now Mrs. Mazonson's voice shook with grief or anger, Florence didn't know which—"any more than your first wife, my daughter, Mr. Stickney. She never left the work till it was done."

"Perhaps if she had left it occasionally she might be living now," the second Mrs. Stickney coolly suggested. At this crisis Mrs. Mazonson sniffled and Miss Susan left the table.

"Florence will become accustomed to our ways after a while," Mr. Stickney responded, with so much consideration in his tone for the tyrant at the head of the table that his wife felt ashamed of him. "She'll work into it after a while," he added, endeavoring to appear at his ease.

"That furbelowed white gown looks like working into it!" said Mrs. Mazonson, defiantly.

"I am not afraid to trust my wife to do the proper thing, Mrs. Mazonson," Mr. Stickney remarked, with tardy decency.

"If I may be allowed," the young wife began, with the deliberation of one making a mighty effort for self-control, "I should like to say a word." As the brave little woman surveyed the assembled group there crept into her face a look that one of the party never forgot. This one was her husband, who started to lay a detaining hand on her arm, but for some inexplicable reason gave it up. "When I take my rightful place as mistress of my husband's house," Mrs. Stickney went on, "then it will be time enough to talk of my duties. You may consider me a summer boarder, if you please," she added, smilingly, "but in whatever light you may regard me"—and now the sweet mouth grew firm again, and the fine eyes struck fire—"please remember that I am the wife of the proprietor of this establishment and the owner of these acres, and expect to be treated, if not with kindness, at least with civility."

"I should like to see you make twenty-five pounds of butter before breakfast!" said Mrs. Mazonson, when she could recover herself. Mr. Stickney played with his spoon, and looked steadily into his coffee-cup, but said not a word.

"You never will see me make twenty-five pounds of butter before breakfast," Mrs. Stickney responded, "and I think it very doubtful if I ever make any butter after breakfast either. I don't intend to give up my music, my painting, my reading, my writing, or anything else that I have been educated to enjoy, and I want this understood also."

"I wonder what you will do if I go away?" Mrs. Mazonson inquired, dubiously but respectfully.

"Mr. Stickney is abundantly able to pay for all necessary service," Florence replied. "If he doesn't choose to do this, then there is a last resort: I can go home to my father any time."

"I ain't got anywhere to go," said Mrs. Mazonson, now thoroughly subdued; "but I suppose I can find a place in a few days, if I may stay here till then. Maria is going to her uncle's tomorrow." The basso-profundo was all broken up, and tears rained down the old lady's face.

Mrs. Stickney rose from her seat and walked round the table to the housekeeper's side. "As far as I am concerned, you are more than welcome to stay," she said, kindly, laying her hand on one tyrannical shoulder. "You know better than any one else how things are done, and have my husband's interest more at heart. I am sure that Miss Susan and I will be good friends," she added, sweetly, "and I see no reason why we may not be a very comfortable family. You understand, I hope, that I do not intend to do any hard work. If it were necessary I would, but it is not. I shall never interfere with your butter or coffee, my dear Mrs. Mazonson, and I am sure you will not with my affairs."

An hour later, Mrs. Stickney and Miss Susan were driving toward Lake Dunmore, as jolly a pair as one would wish to see.

"I am glad you settled it, Florence," Mr. Stickney whispered, as they stood on the piazza previous to setting out.

"No doubt," she replied, with a touch of the old tone he had learned to suspect. "Yesterday, Hubert," she added, "I made a discovery."

"What is it?" he asked.

"That you are a very great coward," she replied.—Harper's Bazar.

A Facetious Deputy Sheriff.

There seems to be something inexpressibly funny in being a Deputy Sheriff, especially one from Buena Vista. Quite interesting tales are told of Deputy Sheriffs from that section. The latest is told of Ike Barrett, who started after Joe Turnbull, the murderer of old man Osborn. Ike as soon as he gets into Taylor Park swears in two Deputies named Ferguson and Buzzard, and together they start for Spring Creek, where they expected to capture Turnbull. Upon arriving at that place Barrett soon succeeded in getting bilin' drunk and forthwith tried to clean out the town. Every man that came along he pulled his pistol on and made them come into the saloon and take a drink. He at last espied Col. J. B. Stone, of Denver, who was in that section looking up mining property.

Barrett drew his pistol on Stone and told him to throw up his hands, which he did, when Barrett went through him, taking a revolver and ten dollars from the Colonel. He then made Stone go ahead into the saloon and take a drink, which the Colonel at first refused to do, when the desperado pulled the cocked revolver on him, saying, with an oath, that if he did not drink he would shoot him. He made every man drink that was in the saloon, and he pulled his revolver on any one whom he thought was not giving him the attention that he desired. He kept Mr. Stone a prisoner from eight a. m. until twelve noon, and paid for the drinks with the money he had taken from the Colonel. His deputies tried to interfere in behalf of the Colonel, but they were soon silenced by his threatening to shoot either one of them if they did not keep their mouths shut. He threatened the barkeeper, who made a run for it, when the desperado fired after the fleeing man, but not with any success. Everybody was trying to sneak out of sight of the madman. One of his deputies mounted a horse and tried to escape, and just as the desperado took aim to fire the man dropped from his horse, thus, no doubt, saving his life, as Barrett is known to be a dead shot, as the following will show. While they were all in the saloon an old man came in with several letters and gave them to Colonel Stone to deliver at the first postoffice he came to out of Spring Creek. Barrett took the letters from the Colonel and threw them on the floor and commenced shooting at them, filling them full of holes. The old man went to pick the letters up to rewrite them, when the villain made the old gentleman hold them out at arms-length, when he commenced shooting at them while he held them in his fingers, shooting them all to pieces. After emptying his revolver he wanted Ferguson to give him his, which he would not do, when he shot at his deputy, the ball passing through his hat, just grazing his head. About this time the Colonel got away and the circus broke up for want of ammunition. Mr. Stone tells this interesting tale himself, which is vouched for by the two deputies. The last heard of Barrett was that he stopped at Texas Creek Friday night. It is thought that if he meets Turnbull they will chum together and make two of the most precious rascals unhung.—Denver News.

Eugenie's Hand in Two Wars.

That the Empress Eugenie was largely responsible for the decision taken by her husband when, in 1870, he ordered that march to Berlin which terminated at Sedan, is one of the undisputed facts of recent history. It is, however, much less generally known that this unhappy woman had also no small share in the declaration of another war. According to Count Kisselef, who acted as Russian Ambassador at Paris after the Crimean war, it was the Empress who decided the irresolute Napoleon to make war against Russia. The story, as told by Count Kisselef, is given on the authority of the Empress herself, who told him on the 12th or 13th of May, 1857, that it was she who was responsible for the declaration of war. When the Czar's letter arrived, the curtness of which notoriously embittered Napoleon, the latter handed it to his wife with the remark that it was cold. "No," said she, after reading it, "it is more than cold, 'elle est grossiere,'" The Emperor read the letter again, and said, "C'est vrai, je me'en occuperai." From that moment, said the Emperor, war was decided on. Count Kisselef replied, "Then it is Your Majesty who has been the cause of the death of 200,000 men and of the loss of seven or eight hundred millions of francs?" "Yes," she answered, "indirectly, and I do not repent of it. Such perturbations are sometimes necessary in the existence of peoples. It was necessary for France to take her rightful place in Europe. She has done this by means of the alliance with England, and by that alliance she will maintain her influence at home and abroad."—Pall Mall Gazette.

FOUR Jourdan glycerine barometers are now in use in or near London. One is at Kew, in the museum of practical geology, one at South Kensington, and one in the office of the London Times. ROSSETTI has found that the temperature of the positive carbon of the electric arc is between 2,400 degrees and 3,000 degrees centigrade, and that of the negative carbon between 2,500 degrees and 3,900 degrees, making, therefore, the temperatures of the extreme points of the electrodes not below 2,500 degrees and 3,900 degrees.

EXPERIMENTS have been made on animals with pure hydrocianic acid by M. Brame. The bodies of those killed with it remained unaffected by decomposition for about a month. IN A communication to the St. Petersburg Technical Society, Prof. Beilstein recommends the use of sulphate of alumnia as the best practical disinfectant. ALARM with indignation has arisen in Halle regarding tarletans rendered poisonous by the introduction of copper arsenite in their production. Dr. Reiman has attempted to allay the general outcry by stating that copper arsenite is not a splendid green color, and as for such goods as tarletans, Guignet's green, which contains no arsenic, has quite displaced the poisonous Schweinfurt green.

THE authority for the statement that after the extraction of the niter from gunpowder the residue cannot be dried at 200 degrees, without a slight loss o the sulphur, is Fresenius. Herr A. Wagner, on the contrary, rises from his experiments with the conviction that no such loss has ever been observed at or below the temperature given. Above that temperature the residue suffers a notable diminution in weight.

The Heroines of Nihilism.

They are mostly daughters of poor army officers, or petty civil officers, or even of shop-keepers, who feeling the influence of modern times, are anxious to rise above the level of their parents, coarse, ignorant people in the main. Either by their own talents or by the aid of influential patrons, the girls gain scholarships, and enter some high school where their brains are crammed with a heterogeneous mass of knowledge. At 19 they leave, and in turn become teachers. Finding their parents uncompanionable, they abandon home for some wretched lodgings, and eke out a miserable existence by giving poorly paid lessons. Food is scarce, the feminine pleasures of dress are impossible, the restraining power of family affection is absent, they grow hopeless and discontented, when some day they form socialistic acquaintances, rapidly adopt their ideas, and, having found an object for their life, with feminine rashness devote themselves to the cause, even to the very death.—Paris Figaro.

WEBSTER.

A Reminiscence of the Great Statesman.

[Richard B. Kimball, in The Dartmouth.]

Shortly after Fenimore Cooper's death there was a meeting of literary men in the city of New York, in the Governor's room at the City Hall. Washington Irving presided. A committee was appointed to make arrangements for a suitable recognition of the event, and further to raise funds for the erection of a monument to the memory of the deceased novelist.

At our first meeting Mr. Bryant was elected to deliver the eulogy, and his acceptance was speedily obtained. After various propositions, Dr. Rufus Griswold, who was the leading spirit throughout, suggested that we should, if possible, get Mr. Webster to preside on the occasion. Mr. Webster was soon to pass through New York on his way to Washington, and I availed myself of the circumstance to see him personally on the subject. I called on him at the Astor House and stated my errand. He seemed somewhat taken back at the proposition, and asked me if I thought it would be quite appropriate.

"I am not a literary man," he said. "It seems to me you should select one for this office."

"Mr. Webster," I replied, "we certainly claim you as such. You will be judged by your printed works, and printed works constitute literature."

He considered a moment and then said: "I have engaged to deliver a discourse before your Historical Society the last week in February. If you can arrange your meeting about the same time I will preside at it."

At the appointed hour I drove to the Astor House for Mr. Webster and brought him to the hall. On the way he repeated twice to himself:

The applause of listening Senates to command.

Turning suddenly to me he exclaimed: "Youngster, what is the line immediately succeeding that?"

The question came so unexpectedly that I could not answer it. We happened to be just opposite Randolph's book store. Stopping the carriage, I jumped out and procured a copy of "Gray's Elegy," came back and read the lines Mr. Webster wished for, and we proceeded on our way.

An amusing incident occurred at the opening. Mr. Irving, whose duty it was as Chairman of our committee to announce Mr. Webster, came forward in his shy, frightened manner, to go through with his task, when some one seated exactly in front of him among the audience rose, and, before Mr. Irving could get out a word, shouted at the top of his voice: "Three cheers for the author of the 'Sketch Book.'" Three cheers were given to Mr. Irving's utter dismay and discomfiture. He stammered out Mr. Webster's name and some inarticulate words about "presiding," then, quickly retreating, he seated himself quite away from observation.

Mr. Webster's opening remarks, the eulogy of Mr. Bryant, the brilliant speeches which followed, and Mr. Webster's closing sentences were carefully reported in the daily journals. I observed that he used the quotations from "Grey's Elegy" while speaking, showing that his mind was occupied with the subject as we rode along.

The assembly broke up at a late hour. I had engaged to bring Mr. Webster to the Century Club after we had concluded, where a handsome collation had been prepared. The club-rooms, at that time, were near by in Broadway. We found a large gathering already assembled, and after a long address of welcome by the venerable Chief Justice of the Superior Court, Samuel Jones, general introductions followed. Mr. Webster remained all the time standing near the head of the table. After some pleasant observations, he remarked that he perceived there were several artists in the company.

"Perhaps, gentlemen, you are not aware," he said, "that many years ago we had in this country two famous pictures by Vandyke," naming them.

At this announcement some of the artists exchanged glances with each other, as much as to say, "He is out of his reckoning this time."

"The circumstances were these," continued Mr. Webster. "There was a wealthy Hollander who, shortly after the beginning of the present century, came to America and took up his residence about fourteen miles from Washington. He was the owner of the two pictures I have mentioned. A portion of his family remained in Holland. At his death, in dividing his property, he left to a daughter in New York those two paintings, or a certain number of guilders, as she should elect. Now, gentlemen," continued Mr. Webster, with an air of intense disgust, "this lady's husband was in trade, and he took the guilders, and the paintings were packed up and sent back to Holland. I was in Congress at the time, and went with a friend to see them before they were carried away."

Nature's Toilette.

"Who has seen Nature getting up 'i the morning? She sleeps a' night in her claes, yet they're never rumpled! her awakening face she turns up, dewy, to the sun, and Zephyr wipes it wi' his wing, without disturbin' its dreamy expression. Never ye see her hair in papers; for, crisp and curly, far-streamin' and wide-wavin' are her locks, as alternate shadows and sunbeams dancin' o' some joyous river, rollin awa' to the far-off sea. Her e'e is heaven—her brow the marbled clouds, ane after a lang doon doon-gazing, serene and spiritual look o' hersell, breathin' her orison-prayers, in the reflectin' magic o' some inland ocean, stately steps she frae the east!"

RESCUED FROM DEATH.

The following statement of William J. Coughlin, of Somerville, Mass., is so remarkable that we beg to ask for it the attention of our readers. He says: "In the fall of 1876, I was taken with a VIOLENT BLEEDING OF THE LUNGS, followed by a severe cough. I soon began to lose my appetite and flesh. I was so weak at one time that I could not leave my bed. In the summer of 1877 I was admitted to the City Hospital. While there the doctors said I had a hole in my left lung as big as a half dollar. I expended over a hundred dollars in doctors and medicines. I was so far gone at one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I laughed at my friends, thinking that my case was incurable, but I got a bottle to satisfy them, when, to my surprise and gratification, I commenced to feel better. My hope, once dead, began to revive, and to-day I feel in better spirits than I have the past three years.

"I write this hoping you will publish it, so that every one afflicted with Diseased Lungs will be induced take DR WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS, and be convinced that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED. I have taken two bottles, and can positively say that it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness. My cough has almost entirely disappeared, and I shall soon be able to go to work." Sold by druggists. I

THE KING FORTUNE-MAKER! OZONE!

A New Process for Preserving all Perishable Articles, Animal and Vegetable, from Fermentation and Putrefaction, Retaining their Odor and Flavor.

"OZONE—Purified air, active state of oxygen."—Webster.

This Preservative is not a liquid, pickle, or any of the old and exploded processes, but is simply and purely OZONE, as produced and applied by an entirely new process. Ozone is the antiseptic principle of every substance, and possesses the power to preserve animal and vegetable structures from decay.

THERE IS NOTHING ON THE FACE OF THE EARTH LIABLE TO DECAY OR SPOIL WHICH OZONE, THE NEW PRESERVATIVE, WILL NOT PRESERVE FOR ALL TIME IN A PERFECTLY FRESH AND PALATABLE CONDITION.

The value of Ozone as a natural preserver has been known to our abler chemists for years, but, until now, no means of producing it in a practical, inexpensive, and simple manner have been discovered. Microscopic observations prove that decay is due to septic matter or minute germs, that develop and feed upon animal and vegetable structures. Ozone, applied by the Prentiss method, seizes and destroys these germs at once, and thus preserves. At our offices in Cincinnati can be seen almost every article that can be thought of, preserved by this process, and every visitor is welcome to come in, taste, smell, take away with him, and test in every way the merits of Ozone as a preservative. We will also preserve, free of charge, any article that is brought or sent prepaid to us, and return it to the sender, for him to keep and test.

FRESH MEATS, such as beef mutton, veal, pork, poultry, game, fish, &c., preserved by this method, can be shipped to Europe, subjected to atmospheric changes, and return to this country in a state of perfect preservation.

EGGS can be treated at a cost of less than one dollar a thousand dozen, and be kept in an ordinary room six months or more, thoroughly preserved; the yolk held in its normal condition, and the eggs as fresh and perfect as on the day they were treated, and will sell as strictly "choice." The advantage in preserving eggs is readily seen; there are seasons when they can be bought for 8 or 10 cents a dozen, band by holding them, can be sold for an advance of from one hundred to three hundred per cent. One man, with this method, can preserve 5,000 dozen a day.

FRUITS may be permitted to ripen in their native climate, and can be transported to any part of the world. The juice expressed from fruits can be held for an indefinite period without fermentation—hence the great value of this process for producing a temperance beverage. Cider can be held perfectly sweet for any length of time.

VEGETABLES can be kept for an indefinite period in their natural condition, retaining their odor and flavor, treated in their original packages, at a small expense. All grains, flour, meal, etc., are held in their normal condition.

BUTTER, after being treated by this process, will not become rancid.

Dead human bodies, treated before decomposition sets in, can be held in a natural condition for weeks, without puncturing the skin or mutilating the body in any way. Hence the great value of Ozone to undertakers.

There is no change in the slightest particular in the appearance of any article thus preserved, and no trace of any foreign or unnatural odor or taste.

The process is so simple that a child can operate it as well and successfully as a man. There is no expensive apparatus or machinery required.

A room filled with different articles, such as eggs, meat, fish, etc., can be treated at one time, without additional trouble or expense.

☞ IN FACT, THERE IS NOTHING THAT OZONE WILL NOT PRESERVE. Think of every thing you can that is liable to sour, decay, or spoil, and then remember that we guarantee that Ozone will preserve it in exactly the condition you want it for any length of time. If you will remember this, it will save asking questions as to whether Ozone will preserve this or that article—IT WILL PRESERVE ANY THING AND EVERYTHING YOU CAN THINK OF.

There is not a township in the United States in which a live man can not make any amount of money, from $1,000 to $10,000 a year, that he pleases. We desire to get a live man interested in each county in the United States, in whose hands we can place this Preservative, and through him secure the business which every county ought to produce.

A FORTUNE Awaits Any Man who secures control of OZONE in any Township or County.

A. C. Bowen, Marion, Ohio, has cleared $2,000 in two months. $2 for a test package was his first investment.

Woods Brothers, Lebanon, Warren County, Ohio, made $6,000 on eggs purchaeed in August and sold November 1st. $2 for a test package was their first investment.

D. F. Webber, Charlotte, Eaton Co., Mich., has cleared $1,000 a month since August. $2 for a test package was his first investment.

J. B. Gaylord, 80 La Salle St., Chicago, is preserving eggs, fruit, etc., for the commission men of Chicago, charging 1¼c. per dozen for eggs, and other articles in proportion. He is preserving 5,000 dozen eggs per day, and on his business is making $3,000 a month clear. $2 for a test package was his first investment.

The cincinnati Feed Co., 498 West Seventh St., is making $5,000 a month in handling brewers malt, preserving and shipping it as feed to all parts of the country. Malt unpreserved sours in 24 hours. Preserved by Ozone it keeps perfectly sweet for months.

These are instances which we have asked the privilege of publishing. There are scores of others. Write to any of the above parties and get the evidence direct.

Now, to prove the absolute truth of every thing we have said in this paper, WE PROPOSE TO PLACE IN YOUR HANDS THE MEANS OF PROVING FOR YOURSELF THAT WE HAVE NOT CLAIMED HALF ENOUGH. To any person who doubts any of these statements, and who is interested sufficiently to make the trip, we will pay all traveling and hotel expenses for a visit to this city, if we fail to prove any statement that we have made.

How to Secure a Fortune with Ozone.

A test package of Ozone, containing a sufficient quantity to preserve one thousand dozen eggs, or other articles in proportion, will be sent to any applicant on receipt of $2. This package will enable the applicant to pursue any line of tests and experiments he desires, and thus satisfy himself as to the extraordinary merits of Ozone as a Preservative. After having thus satisfied himself, and had time to look the field over to determine what he wishes to do in the future—whether to sell the article to others, or to confine it to his own use, or any other line of policy which is best suited to him and to his township or county—we will enter into an arrangement with him that will make a fortune for him and give us good profits. We will give exclusive township or county privileges to the first responsible applicant who orders a test package and desires to control the business in his locality. THE MAN WHO SECURES CONTROL OF OZONE FOR ANY SPECIAL TERRITORY, WILL ENJOY A MONOPOLY WHICH WILL SURELY ENRICH HIM.

Don't let a day pass until you have ordered a Test Package, and if you desire to secure an exclusive privilege we assure you that delay may deprive you of it, for the applications come in to us by scores every mail—many by telegraph. "First come first served," is our rule.

If you do not care to send money in advance for the test package we will send it C. O. D., but this will put you to the expense of charges for return of money. Our correspondence is very large; we have all we can do to attend to the shipping of orders and giving attention to our working agents. Therefore, we can not give any attention to letters which do not order Ozone. If you think of any article that you are doubtful about Ozone preserving, remember we guarantee that it will preserve it, no matter what it is.

REFERENCES:

We desire to call your attention to a class of references which no enterprise or firm based on any thing but the soundest business success and highest commercial merit could secure.

We refer, by permission, as to our integrity and to the value of the Prentiss Preservative, to the following gentlemen: Edward C. Boyce, Member Board of Public Works; E. O. Eshelby, City Comptroller; Amor Smith, Jr., Collector Internal Revenue; Wulsin & Worthington, Attorneys; Martin H. Harrell and B. F. Hopkins, County Commissioners; W. S. Cappeller, County Auditer; all of Cincinnati, Hamilton County, Ohio. These gentlemen are each familiar with the merits of our Preservative, and know from actual observation that we have without question the most Valuable Article in the World!

The $2 you invest in a test package will surely lead you to secure a township, or county, and then your way is absolutely clear to make from $2,000 to $10,000 a year.

DR. PRICE'S REPUTATION!

Has been acquired by candid, honest dealing and years of successful practice.

My practice, not one of experiment, but founded on the laws of Nature, with years of experience and evidence to sustain it, does not tear down, make sick to make well; no harsh treatment, no trifling, no flattering. We know the cause and the remedy needed; no guess work, but knowledge gained by years of experience in the treatment of Chronic Diseases exclusively; no encouragement without a prospect. Candid in our opinions, reasonable in our charges, claim not to know everything or cure everybody, but do lay claim to reason and common sense. We invite the sick, no matter what their ailment, to call and investigate before they abandon hope, make interrogations and decide for yourselves; it will cost nothing as consultation is free. Visits made regularly.

NATURALIST: Can a wolf become fond of a man? He can, and would just as soon have him raw as cooked.

IT'S NONSENSE—to suffer with dyspepsia or pleurisy, or inflammation of the kidneys, when by going to the Grand hotel or to Stearns & Baker's drugstore, you can get a bottle of E. S. Reynold's wonderful discovery, which will give immediate relief, and effect a permanent cure. If not, your money will be refunded. Also, a sure cure for catarrh of the head, go to Stearns & Baker's for sample bottles, free.

COINCIDENCE Extraordinaire—The reports of French military movements in Tunis are from the pen of M. le Col. Canard.

SHE SAID SO—A lady from out of town was heard to say, "My husband gave me some money to go to Janesville and get me a silk dress and dolman with. He told me to look around and buy where I could the cheapest. I did so; I went into every dry goods store in the city with the following result: I bought 20 yards of black silk from Archie Reid 10 cents a yard cheaper than I could get it anywhere else, and on my dolman, I know I saved $4.00, sure. I just took those six dollars I saved, and bought my husband a nice Christmas present with it, and now I am happy."

It is told about a Las Vegas girl: While sitting under a tree at Mineral City, waiting for her lover, a cinnamon bear came along, and approaching from behind, began to hug her. She thought it was her king of men, and so leaned back and enjoyed it hugely, murmuring, "Tighter." It broke the bear all up, and he retreated to the hills and hid in the forest three days to get over his mortification.

Years of Suffering.

BRIEFLETS.

—Another church fair next week.

—Only one more week in which to darn your stockings for Christmas.

—The fourth Sunday in advent comes forth to make its advent to-morrow.

—An entertainment at the Opera house every evening next week except Monday.

—If Vennor does his duty the new steam heating apparatus in the Opera house will get practically tested next week, there being a show for it every night.

—Last night some one entered the office of Oscar Rowe's tobacco warehouse in search of plunder. The office clock was taken but aside from this nothing of value is missed.

—Uncle Billy James, as he has been familiarly known, died this morning. He was one of the pioneer settlers of Milton, and was one of the oldest residents in this vicinity.

—St. Patrick's Total Abstinence and Benevolent society is to give a dance on the evening of January 2d. Anderson's band will furnish the music, and no requisite for a good time will be lacking.

—Some boy or boys bent on devilry have broken a window in the new Congregational chapel by throwing a stone through it. Words fail to do justice in such a case. A thick-soled slipper, put where it will do the most good, is better than words.

—The divorce case of James Winters vs. Catherine Winters, was not finished yesterday, the time being taken up in hearing evidence to show that the wife was too much given to drink. The evidence for the defendant was not taken, the court adjourning until Monday morning.

—A wild whooping attracted attention on the corner of Milwaukee and River streets this morning. It was only a chimney sweep, who took this way of showing his belief that advertising paid, and not having the means to spend on newspapers, was running an organ of his own—a vocal organ.

—Next Monday, so say the wise men of the almanac, will be the shortest day in the year, that is, it will be twenty-four hours long, the same as the others, but will have less daylight in it. The other days of next week will have a minute more of daylight, and those of the week following will lengthen out a minute beyond that.

—Oscar Antre, of Edgerton, came to Janesville yesterday on a combination of business and pleasure. He got in a little too large a proportion of pleasure, and this morning had to take an unpleasant dose of business, it being to pay into the Municipal Court $2 and costs for his little spree.

—In another column E. T. Foote, the well known clothier, has a word to say about the holidays. He has an excellent line of clothing and gents' furnishing goods, and many novelties, conspicuous among which is an initial separable sleevebutton, which seems to strike the boys as being about the nobbiest and richest thing out this season.

—The first dime lecture in the course arranged by the Young Men's Christian Association was given last evening at the parlors of the Baptist church, B. F. Dunwiddie, Esq., being the speaker, and his theme "The Old and the New." The lecture was a well-written, interesting and thoughtful one, and proved an auspicious opening for the series.

—One of the Merry club had the misfortune to mislay his hat last night at the weekly dance. This forenoon his friends gathered up stray hats and sent them to him one at a time, but none proved to be the missing head-covering. The last small boy who appeared at the office did not have time to deliver his package, and brought it back with him, having got shot out of the office bodily, the recipient of so many old hats having got tired of receiving them and having no more storage room. At the time of going to press the score stood 43.

—To "scientific student"—Thank you for selecting the Gazette as the organ to be honored above all others for the publication of your essay on the longevity of life but life is not yet long enough to spend time in printing or reading your contribution to science. Many of your suggestions, if put into practice, would doubtless lengthen life, but your theory is too complicated, and there are too many rules to follow. The simplest and surest rule is to keep breathing. As long as a man will do that he is pretty sure to live, and when he breaks that rule for any considerable length of time, he is very apt to die.

THE FEMALE DETECTIVE.

Such is the title of the play with which Simon's Comedy company opens its week's engagement next Tuesday evening at the Opera house. There will be a change of bill every evening, and as the prices are popular, full houses may be expected.

The Hastings, Minn. Gazette says:

Encored:—The most popular theatrical favorites of Hastings, which comprises Simon's Comedy company, have by urgent solicitation of many of our leading citizens consented to return and favor us with entertainments to-night and to-morrow night.

The troupe left an excellent name behind them when they departed last week, and the crowded houses they will receive this time will aptly attest their popularity and the esteem in which they are here held.

WORTHY WORKMEN.

At a meeting last night of Olive Branch lodge, Ancient Order of United Workmen, the following were elected officers for the ensuing term:

P. M. W.—Wm, Marsden.
M. W.—A. J. Roberts.
For.—Robt. Acheson.
C.—W. G. Palmer.
R.—C. E. Church.
Fin.—E. J. Kent.
Rec.—H. Buchholz.
G.—E. Patch.
I. W.—E. E. Burdick.
O. W.—W. G. Wheelock.

NO MORE SUNRISE

Dr. Charles Sunrise, the Indian who has practiced his art at a great many places in Wisconsin and the West, died at St. Paul recently from the effects of whiskey and opium. Dr. Sunrise was one of the most accomplished practicioners of his school, and the barkeeper whom he could not hang up for a drink never lived. His art was the healing art and many is the time he has been seen heeling it out of a saloon to avoid a personal controversy with the proprietor. His politeness was proverbial, and he would always step to one side and let a piece of brick or a junk bottle pass, if he saw it in time. His horror of work was so great as to amount to a species of hydrophobia, and it is supposed that he was bitten years ago by some laboring man. People who knew him best called him a quack, and the St. Paul and La Crosse papers even head his obituary "Another Quack Gone," but the persons whom Dr. Sunrise has cured can be numbered by the hundreds. No person ever trusted him that was not cured, and the Doctor had any quantity of testimonials to that effect.—Peck's Sun.

There are many here who remember Dr. Sunrise, and will be interested if not saddened, at learning of his sunset. He practiced here some time, but it was one of those cases in which practice did not make perfect. He was wonderful in his treatment of fistulas. He could find one where no physician of the regular school could discover even a sign of one. Among those who will remember Dr. Sunrise with special vividness are the professional gentlemen including a lawyer, an editor, and Deacon Monroe, who were summoned to see him remove one of these fistulas, and to serve as witnesses that he could do it without pain, either to the patient, or himself. The editor was time-keeper, and of course was expected to keep his eyes so closely on the ticker that he could not watch the operation closely enough to steal the trade. The lawyer was set to grinding herbs to occupy his attention, and Deacon Monroe served as door-keeper, and bounced intruders. The operation consisted of spreading a thick poultice upon the spot under which the fistula was supposed to exist, and after scratching in the poultice with a pin, to squeeze out the fistula without breaking the skin. While the witnesses to the operation were busy keeping time, grinding herbs, and watching the door, the doctor succeeded in bringing a strange looking thing to light, which he called a fistula. The eye-witnesses caught enough of a glimpse of the operation, however, to be convinced that the doctor had the supposed fistula concealed in one hand all the time, and simply but dexterously forced it through the poultice while his assistant with a pair of nippers pulled it out from between the doctor's forefinger and thumb, which were buried in the poultice. Dr. Sunrise removed a great many so-called fistulas while here, and after he left, there were a goodly number of those whose skin had been so scratched with brass pins as to make the sale of lotions and healing balsams quite lively. But now that he is dead and gone, it is no more than just that the tribute be paid him that, professionally he did the best he knew how to secure the fees he received.

PERSONAL.

—Rev. F. F. Barrett, who was graduated at Beloit college in 1871, was last Thursday ordained pastor of the Congregational church at Evansville.

—Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Lane, have returned from Whitewater, where they have been visiting friends, and expect to leave on Monday for their new home in Caldwell, Kansas.

—Rev. Henry Sewell preached on Guiteau last Sunday night, and told them he believed the assassin should be hung. Mr. Sewell, while here, stirred up no little commotion by his outspoken words in favor of capital punishment, and he has now a good subject to illustrate with.

—Miss Minerva Guernsey, of this city, has been engaged with the Bernhard Listerman Concert Company, of Boston, under the management of the Redpath Lyceum Bureau, to give a series of entertainments in the principal cities of the Eastern and Middle States during the months of March and April. The Listerman Company is one of the finest instrumental combinations in America, representing the finest soloists from the Thomas Orchestra, Mendelssohn Quintette Club, Boston Philharmonic Club and the Beethoven Club. In this new combination of the musical with the dramatic, Miss Guernsey will appear as the dramatic star.

BOLD FOOT PADS.

Last evening about 7 o'clock a bold attempt at highway robbery was made, the person assailed being William Hadden, of the town of Harmony. He was proceeding on his way homeward, having been here with a load of barley which he had sold. When about two miles east of the city three men rushed out from the side of the road, two grabbed his horses by the heads, and the third attacked him. He tried to whip up his horses, and the men in their struggles turned the horses nearly around. The man who attacked him struck him with a club across the back, dealing a heavy blow, causing some pain, but inflicting no serious injury. Before the attempt at robbery could be made successful Mr. Hadden succeeded in whipping the horses into a break-away from the men in the road, and started briskly for this city. The attempt at robbery was evidently made by persons who knew that Mr. Hadden had been selling his barley, and who thought he had considerable money with him.

Catarrh.

Mothers! Mothers!! Mothers!!!

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the excruciating pain of cutting teeth? If so, go at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother on earth who has ever used it, who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother, and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe to use in all cases, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Sold everywhere 25 cents a bottle. mar18d-mon-wed-sat-33w1y

To Contractors.

Notice is hereby given that sealed proposals will be received by the Building Commissioners of Dane county, until 12 o'clock noon, of January 5th, 1882, for furnishing all the labor and material necessary for a building for the chronic insane, to be erected on the Dane County Poor Farm, and erecting and completing the same, including all furnaces, pipes, ventilators and all other things mentioned in the specifications or shown on the plans, said building to be completed and ready for occupancy on or before the first day of September, 1882, according to the plans and specifications adopted by the commissioners, which can be seen at the office of John Nader, architect, at the city hall, in Madison, Wis.

Bids will also be received by the commissioners for the construction of said building upon the adopted plans and specifications as modified in the heating and ventilation by the accompanying plans and specifications drawn by the "Buttan Heating & Ventilating Co." to adopt the same to the use of their furnaces, said bids not to include furnaces, registers, valves or connecting pipes.

Bids will also be received separately on the following classes of work:

1. Mason work, including the necessary excavations; 2. Carpenter work; 3. Plastering; 4. Tinner's work; 5. Plumber's work; 6. Iron work; 7. Hardware; 8. Painting and glazing; 9. Heating apparatus, including furnaces, pipes, valves, registers and dampers, guaranteed to heat the building to 70 degrees in the coldest weather. The bid in each case to include all the labor and material necessary in that department, according to the specifications.

Parties to whom the contract or contracts may be awarded, will be required to give bonds with sufficient sureties (to be approved by the commissioners) for the faithful performance of their contract.

Proposals can be sent to Wm. Charlton, Madison, Wis.

Payments will be made in cash, at such times and in such sums, as may be agreed upon between the commissioners and contractor.

The commissioners reserve the right to reject any or all bids, that they may consider not for the best interest of the county, without incurring any liabilities whatever.

WM. CHARLTON,
C. E. WARNER,
MICHAEL JOHNSON,
Building Commissioners.
